

Teaching Lessons - How to Handle the Don't Sees and Won't Sees:

Teach your children that every individual has a Free Will (given by God) and is therefore a Free Moral Agent. They can believe what they desire but that what we believe has consequences – here and eternally. So how do we handle the critics – here are some things to do:

- Stand for God's truth and don't be ashamed of it – you have a first amendment right.
- Second – don't compromise what you believe – even if people don't like it.
- Third – don't argue with them, state what you believe and why – agree to disagree. Your reward of recognition for being right awaits you heaven. And all of heaven celebrates when you stand with God's Truth as it is written in the Bible.
- Fourth – love them as a person and respect them as an individual – just don't agree with or go along with their views. This means disagreeing without being disagreeable.
- Fifth – when someone gets hostile or angry – remember it is not about you but is typically about what is going on inside of them or with them. Separate the person from their attitude and actions.
- Sixth – It is o.k. to answer questions on school tests about Darwin's theory. Just remember it is his theory and is inaccurate and unproven. It is like answering questions about a book that you read – perhaps it is fiction or you just don't care for it. You can still answer questions about what was in it. Now if someone asked me if the theory is the truth – I would say no.
